

Workcamp 2012

13th – 24th of August

Harzungen, the camp next door.

Over the last 65 years no one really cared about this place and its story, most of the people nowadays would not even know, that there was a place like this in their “neighborhood”.

But how can you forget that there was a concentration camp? 4 000 prisoners from many European countries were forced to work there for the Nazis, during the last year of the war. “Harzungen” was the second biggest subcamp of the camp-complex Mittelbau-Dora.

In August 2012 we will try to bring this part of the European History back to memory. Together in a group of young people from all over Europe (world?) we will do more research, get into contact with the citizens and try to make the History of that place “visible” in some way.

If you are already 18 years old, motivated in doing serious works and have a good command over english, you will have the great chance to participate in this project. You will get to know the History, work together in an international team, take part in the discussions, put the idea into practice and finally present the result to a wide public. It will be an experience, you will think of for a long time.

You will have no costs
(apart from your own travel costs).
